How Husbands Can Help their Home-Schooling Wives

1. Be equally committed to Home-Schooling, as your wife is.

2. Provide supportive & sacrificial Leadership in your Home and in Home-Schooling.

3. Pray daily for your wife and children.

4. Get involved in the home-schooling:

a. Teach a subject or more of your interest and ability

b. Take notice of your kid's work-sheets, tests, projects etc.

c. Praise your kids for a job well done.

d. Be willing to help explain a tough lesson that a child is having trouble understanding.

e. Have times of recreation with the children.

5. Do the spiritual training of your children (Deut. 6:7; Gen.18:19)

6. Be the "Bread-winner" for the family.
   Don't expect your wife to be a full-time homemaker and teacher and financial provider. Her work place is at home (Titus 2:5).

7. Lend a helping hand as often as possible.
   Once in a while: wash dishes, order a pizza, fold laundry, vacuum etc. A special lifting of some of her responsibility is especially encouraging if she is down, tired, or overwhelmed.

8. Support her as the teacher and require the children to respect her.

9. Be understanding.
   Don't expect a perfect, spotless house all the time. Be flexible. Help motivate the children to pick up toys, help clean etc.

10. Encourage and praise her for doing a good job.

11. Take her out alone on an occasional date or dinner. She needs a break with you once in a while.

12. Continue to join with your wife in attending Home-Schooling support group meetings.
